

'Dramatic Change In Average HIV Life Assurance'

Unusual Risks, the medical financial advisers have today published the results of their latest research into the average amounts of Life Assurance that HIV Positive men and women are insuring themselves for. Currently HIV Positive people who are taking out Life Assurance in the UK are insuring themselves for an average of £114,607*.

This latest survey was conducted as a follow up to similar surveys released around the same issues where the average figures were £134,130* in 2012 and £134,667* in 2013. Although the new figures are surprising they reflect changes in the general accessibility of Life Insurance products to the HIV community.

Chris Morgan, Marketing Manager of Unusual Risks, Mortgage & Insurance Services says,

'It has come as a complete surprise that the Average Sum Assured of an HIV Life Assurance Policy has decreased over the last year to £114,607. However, at the same time over the last twelve months we have also seen a rapid increase in the number of people taking up HIV Life Assurance products'.

'We believe the volume of people taking HIV Life Assurance has increased by around 140% over the last two years, which seems to have had an effect on the average sum-assured being taken by policy holders. We are of course delighted to see that more people with HIV are protecting their homes, mortgages, families and children'.

Unusual Risks have been campaigning for a wider range of Life Insurance products and fairer premiums since the launch of HIV Life Assurance back in 2009. Over the last five years there has been a continued change in the accessibility of HIV Life Assurance, with premiums now being both realistic and affordable for those applying for cover.

In last year's HIV Life Assurance Survey it was established that 70% of Life Insurance providers now offer cover to people with HIV. However, the terms and premiums they offer vary wildly between different insurance companies. Those looking for HIV Life Assurance are urged to seek specialist advice before applying for Insurance.
